

What almost never happens
Jason Ohler © 1989

What almost never happens is this, colon:
Someone, anywhere, in a store say, anytime,
during the holidays say, Easter, for example,
looks beyond, say it's a guy, himself,
and presses his palms on the great body of nothingness
and hears only peace;
and this makes him, say, full and happy,
and leaves him believing in, say, IT, capital "I".

Now that almost never happens.